SUNDAY HORSE RACING.

The horse racing allowed by the managers of the State Fair on Sunday last at Reno is a subject of much unfavorable comment on all sides. Even that class of people who do not care to pay any special observance to the Christian Sabbath condemn the acts of the State Fair managers in unmeasured terms. It is, we believe, the first instance in the United States where such a thing received the sanction of a State agricultural society. While the proportion of people is large who do not consider the first day of the week any more a sacred day than the remaining six, there is still an underlying sentiment in all civilized communities that the day is a little different from the rest and should be respected as such. There is also a strong religious element whose feelings are entitled to respect, and the horse race on Sunday last at Reno was an insult to every religious body in the State. Aside from the principle at stake, the races had not the redeeming feature of being good ones or on the square. The jockies have had it all their own way at the fair and the racing was a thorough swindle on the community and run solely in the interests of the turf gamblers and blacklegs who run horses simply as a medium through which they may fleece the gudgeons of a community. Many Carsonites who attended the races state that the jobbery and robbery was open and notorious, and there seemed to be no one with backbone enough to rule the tricksters off the track. The Reno fair has never been of any real benefit to the State. Under the convenient cover of a pumpkin display the California horsemen come over the line, clean up vast sums of money and slide over the border with their illegitimate gains in their pockets. As an illustration of the way these things are managed one has simply to call attention to the way Carson was treated in its attempt to have three days of a turf meeting here. The committee were unable to make any arrangements with the jockies unless the latter were to be allowed their own way to fix up and run the races as they saw fit. As soon as they learned that the Carson Jockey Club was to manage the races "on the square" they made all sorts of excuses and backed out, although the purses to be run for were all ready to be hung up.

Strother in Eureka.

The Eureka Leader makes the following mention of Mr. Strother's appearance in Eureka:

Mr. E. Strother was introduced, and in a few well-timed, appropriate remarks, delivered in a matter-of-fact, business-like way, he gained the favor of the audience. The impression left upon his hearers was that he is an earnest, straightforward man, who indulges in no clap-trap to catch votes, but appeals to the good sense of his hearers. It will take more smiles than ever wreathed the phiz of Jewett Adams to undo the work he accomplished in the few minutes in which he addressed the Base Rangers.

So far in this campaign Jewett Adams has not put in an appearance on the platform. His limited knowledge of the language prevents him from making a speech and he does not dare trust himself on the rostrum.

It seems that Judge Field's infernal machine came from a litigant who thought Field had rendered an unjust decision. The Judge regards it as very strange that the man should seek his life, as the decision was in his favor. This does not strike anyone as strange who reads the Supreme Court decisions. The language was so ambiguous that the man took it for an adverse ruling and acted accordingly. It is to be hoped that the lesson of Judge Field's experience will not be lost on the judicial profession throughout the country.

The Chronicle says the non-sectarian amendment to the Constitution received the unanimous vote of both parties. The Chronicle is incorrect. There were 560 votes against it, and most of them in Elko county, which gave the Democrats a heavy majority.

The registration books will close in ten days from to-day. Voters should not delay registering, especially Republican voters.
